GLADES WATER TABLE DECLARED PRECARIOUS BY REPRESENTATIVE MEETING

Six Candidates Qualify Against Incumbents For Three Commissioner Jobs

Carlton Has Two Opponents
Close Race For
After Other Job

City politics has become as attractive to seven additional persons recently and the campaign should produce some good arguments, pro and con, maybe a few cigars, some baby-kissing and some good old every day gossip, for no office is free of contests.

Sara Lee Creech has come out against C. Lee for the West Borough. Lester Rhudy and George E. Teller are opposing H. O. (Cocky) Carlton; four ambitious individuals want the job in the central borough. Zachary was the first to announce, and now comes Elmer C. Mayo, Howard E. Blair, and A. J. Robinson. Only Richardson has held office previously.

All of the candidates are "for the good people," but have not particular platforms, other than that, have not yet been disclosed.

In the first primary you vote for one, and if one candidate does not receive a majority, then there will be a second race. With this as a basis, there is only one race—the west borough—where the decision will be made in the first race.

Election day is September 15th, and we should have an interesting three weeks campaign.

City Manager Is Election Question For All Voters

Voters in the coming City Elections will be asked to vote on accepting the act which provides "that the City Commission shall appoint a City Manager."

If you want a City Manager vote for this, and ask all candidates what their stand will be. Incidentally, would you run a half million dollar a year business without some one as manager?

Golf news is scarce these days. Too much rain or showers just when the ladies start teeing off or they play several holes and are drenched before reaching the shelter they decide it isn't worth the effort. So maybe when the rains let up and cooler weather is here play can be resumed.

Edith Venn Lundgren and Rayner Wicks are back but they have played at home leaving them busy after being gone most of the summer.

The girls will go to West Palm Beach Sunday, to play in the intercity matches in which they were routed out a couple of weeks ago, and the ladies will play at the Hollywood Country Club in the Gulfstream Tournament. Louise McWhorter, Kat Wicks and Ruth Zimman are the only players going down Friday.

Cattle Sales Fall At Both Monday And Thursday's Auction

Described by most cattlemen in the know as a temporary market fluctuation, the recent lowering prices for dressed beef in the Miami and other areas, evidently has caused Glades cattlemen to draw back and hold off cattle for sale, for both Monday's and Thursday's auctions were below the normal expected offerings.

At Thursday's sale there were only 104 cattle, with slaughterers offering approximately $1.00 higher than Monday's. There is no report on this sale, as there were not enough of each kind to justify quotation.

At Monday's sale, 82 cows, 30 heifers, 6 bulls, 103 steers, 165 calves, and 12 yearlings.

89% went to slaughter.

FLOOD CONTROL MEETING

(Continued from Page One) ing these items had already been recommended to their respective supervisory bodies. It was decided that Congressional action, in the form of appropriations is next in line as an objective.

John Dulany offered a resolution which was finally adopted later in the meeting after slight changes which expressed the ideas of the meeting declaring an emergency and asking the Corps of Engineers and the C&SFCD - to declare an emergency and take immediate steps to provide adequate and reasonable protection for such dangers of flood.

Emmett Roberts, president of the RDB, under whose auspices the meeting was held declared, "We are gratified at the attendance for the meeting and the wholehearted spirit in which everyone entered into the discussion. We feel that both the Glades farmer and the Engineers benefitted greatly. We have a better understanding of the problem of the Engineers, our Congressional Delegation and the C&SFCD, and most certainly the Corps of Engineers have a more lucid insight into the problems of the local farmer."

It was announced during the meeting that a hearing will be held before the Budget Commission in Washington during early September in an effort to have the project re-instated in the recommendations of that Commission.

It was also stated, by Mr. Turner Wallis, that one year had been lost thru the omission of an appropriation by the last Congress.

No certainty of the future is predictable because of the uncertainty of policy of the national administration, it was pointed out.

Luther Jones, Committee Chairman, pointed out to the audience that "Congress is the answer to our problems. We have an immense job of selling you, and you, who have friends, or who have friends that have friends, in the National Congress, to force our aid."

A majority of the attendance remained till the vote, to adjourn came.

"DON'T FORCE ME OUT!" Sportsman's Prayer

A Salifish of 82 pounds, landed with an 8-pound (eight) tenpound line, has brought fame to Fred Phillips, of Miami, the successful angler. It just goes to show that most fishermen continue to use gear which is far too heavy. Phillips was fishing the ocean in a small skiff, casting with light tackle for dolphin, when the sail rocked his artificial lure. It took him about an hour and a half to boat the big salifish. The line he used was of Ashway make — a line much lighter than many anglers use for black bass!

Havahart "box" traps, for taking varmints alive and without hurting them, have often been mentioned in this column. Quail and small game destroyers, such as possum, wild house cats etc. are easily eliminated with this humane trap. The same thing applies to enemies of song birds. Not long ago I suggested that these Havahart traps should be standard equipment for members of the Audubon Society. Now Fox E. Conner, who manufactures these traps, has come out with a most interesting booklet, free for the asking, telling about "Humane Havahart Traps." Write him at Box 551, Ossining, New York and get your copy. I believe that more of these varmint-catchers should be in the hands of bird lovers and sportsmen.

A Boost now for the "Tuttle Talks on Photography" which appears frequently in Florida newspaper. Photography can add much to the enjoyment of the outdoors and all of the outdoor sports. Making good pictures is easy, provided you've got the right equipment (which need not be expensive) and the know-how. This knowledge of how to take good pictures can be quickly acquired. Generally speaking, it is best to use a flash bulb with all pictures, these days — and this applies especially to "snap" made outdoors in bright sunlight. The expert can make good pictures in shady places without flash bulbs, though the non-expert cannot. So the rule which says, "always use a flash bulb" is a pretty safe one to follow. Will you please "send good photographs to this column" still stands.

Trigger Pull on a revolver or pistol regulates the accuracy of this trip, on the usual summer trip, we took another route through Georgia. Not a watermelon field did we see, all the way through the state, and no fields of cantaloupes, either. Swinging into Griffin, Ga. from the east, we finally did see these small patch orchards — the only peaches observed on a daylight run through the entire state! Pecan trees, yes, plenty of those. But it is a bit unusual to traverse Georgia without seeing lots of peaches, lots of watermelons, lots of cantaloupes. But did it!

This business and pleasure of teaching youngsters how to enjoy the out-of-doors can hardly be over-emphasized. Sportsmanship, conservation of natural resources, the ability to take care of one's self in any situation, these things are the result of such training.

It is indeed a patriotic duty to train the young people of Florida, and elsewhere in the outdoor lore. Fishing is often the best place to start as almost every human enjoys this sport. So I prevailed upon a friend of mine, Homer Circle, of the famous Jas. Heddons Sons organization, to write me a guest column on the subject of youngsters and fishing. No one is better equipped than Sportsman Circle to write about angling, and one of his hobbies is "kids in fishing." So here goes. The accompanying picture of Circle will show readers what he looks like, — always a desirable thing with a newspaper column. He is a handsome gent, besides being a gentleman and a scholar. This is his story:

One of the easiest ways to a kid's heart is through a fishing pole. There is hardly a fisherman reading these lines who cannot recall his first fishing trip, and countless pleasures derived through the years.

A lowly cane pole is suddenly transformed into a magic wand the instant a kid is found at one end with a lively fish at the other. That magic wand has the power to instill memories that live forever, and many a tired crowd finds his mind wandering, barfetched, back to the old fishing hole. In these days he had a rusted bob, or a bent tin, green's trine, a nail for a sinker, a can of 1-d worms, a pole of some sort, and the burning desire to play hooky and tangle with a big one!

Today he has the finest hooks metallurgical science can devise, nearly invincible lines of fabulous nylon, lead sinkers of clever design, the finest glass rods money can buy—and the burning desire to play hooky and tangle with a big one!

But for every tried, faithful grown-up who would like to retrace those happy steps over a once-familiar path, there are countless kids who never will know such thrills, such precious memories. There are new paths to be worn and a new generation eager to be shown how, why and where this fishing thing is done. Heavily on the shoulders of all fishermen rests this responsibility. In every neighborhood, just around the corner lives a kid who never will know these hallowed memories which come from "just dishing" unless some fisherman puts an arm around his or her shoulder and shows the way.

There are new paths to be worn and a new generation eager to be shown how, why and where this fishing thing is done. Heavily on the shoulders of all fishermen rests this responsibility. In every neighborhood, just around the corner lives a kid who never will know these hallowed memories which come from "just dishing" unless some fisherman puts an arm around his or her shoulder and shows the way.

Now is an excellent time to resolve that this year you'll do it—you'll find an eager kid and teach him or her the things about fishing you've learned to love.

And you know something? When this year rolls to an end it will be one of the finest of your entire fishing lifetime for you will have new memories to augment the old. And what's more, you will have created a pretty wonderful character — a fisherman!

Mehmet, the Turk HAS REASON TO SMILE

The AVERAGE TURK is sentimental about his wooden plow — a sentimental "he" today, he is busy putting it in a museum. After all, the wooden plow, handed down from father to son, had served him since the days of Suley Pasha. Today, however, things are different. Two years ago, Mehmet and most of his brother-fraternal, joined in a new government which took on the raising of farm production as its first job.

First, the Government taught Mehmet the value of the steel plow and, when they convinced him, he went out and bought one. He used to borrow money but the Government helped him. Mehmet soon found that he was not only able to plow more, but that his yield per acre had increased. On the past farm, Mehmet, with a larger holding, was using a tractor. In a year's time

Abmet, after a lifetime of struggle, had become a prosperous man. His son had learned to run the tractor at a government training school.

Turkey is no longer a drain on a hungry world. Turkish food is going to Europe and Asia because the "steel plow" has won the day over the wooden plow.
